
Instructions

Use this form for new applicants. This application is for use in California. Employers with operations in multi-states should review the specific requirements of those states.

Optional Language

The application contains two different options for employers to use depending on their specific business needs.

Public Records Searches

Page 6 of the employment application contains an optional paragraph relating to public records searches. If you do not conduct internal public record searches as part of your background check of job candidates, you do not need to include this paragraph on the job application. If you do conduct such internal searches for purposes of obtaining factual job-related information for the specific position being applied for, you must include this paragraph.

Information obtained during public records searches can only be used to the extent allowed by law including restrictions on the use of criminal history information. For more information, visit HRCalifornia's Background Checks and Testing page.

Criminal History Information

Page 7 of the employment application contains optional language that you can use to obtain criminal conviction information. Employers can seek certain specified criminal conviction information when they can show that the information requested is specifically job related for the position the applicant is seeking and consistent with business necessity. There are restrictions on the type of information that can be obtained. For more information, visit HRCalifornia's Obtaining Criminal History page.

State and local agencies are generally prohibited from asking applicants about criminal convictions, unless required by law. Local ordinances, such as San Francisco's Fair Chance Ordinance, may also limit the ability to obtain criminal history information.
